BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

The Treadwell family possessed a charter from Charles II and originally settled in North Carolina. Some members of the family moved to the Mississippi Territory when it was still considered the Choctaw Nation. They settled in northeastern Mississippi around Lamar and Davis Mills (now Michigan City) and some family members have remained until today.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

Series I, Personal & Business Correspondence, contains all correspondence excluding the separately donated letters between Allie Treadwell and J. Marvin Aldrich located in Series II; however, Series I does contain some correspondence related to these two individuals. Series I includes political commentaries, discussions of secession & other war-time events, correspondence about & by slaves, invitations and miscellaneous family correspondence. There are also World War I letters from Ransom Aldrich to his parents.

Materials in Series II, Allie Treadwell (later Aldrich) and J. Marvin Aldrich Letters, were donated separately and primarily consist of the love letters between Allie Treadwell and J. Marvin Aldrich. There is also correspondence during their marriage.

Series III, Legal & Business Documents, contain land deeds, slave lists, slave valuations, promissory notes, Revolutionary War pension papers, statements of accounts, miscellaneous business papers, account books and many receipts, including cotton, poll, tuition, and real property tax receipts, masonic and freight. Series II also contains Oaths of Loyalty, materials related to John G. Jones's position at the Methodist Episcopal Church, materials related to T.L. Treadwell's and Company G, 50th regiment of Mississippi Militia as well as documents related to Post Office appointment in Lamar, Mississippi. One family member was an attorney so the collection contains many different types of legal records. Other family vocations include cotton farming, animal husbandry, ferry management, postal work, mercantile shopkeeping, and investing in real estate and railroads. There are several different examples of labor contracts in the collection. Many of the children were educated. There is supporting documentation pertaining to secondary schools and universities throughout the South, beginning in the 1840's; Series II contains materials related to the education of various members of the family as well as documents related to Lamar Female Academy, which the family helped establish.

Series IV, Miscellaneous, includes an Undated Family Tree, leather wallets, book jackets, programs, speeches, clippings, announcements pertaining to slave births & deaths, ephemeral items, materials related to the "Know Mississippi Better" railroad project, calling & business cards, compositions and poetry.

Series V, Photographs, contains family photographs as well as images of unidentified others.
