

University of Mississippi

eGrove

Resources for The Children Shall Lead

Freedom Riders: The Children Shall Lead

4-1-2005

Activity Descriptions

William Winter Institute for Racial Reconciliation

Follow this and additional works at: https://egrove.olemiss.edu/winter_freedom_resources

Recommended Citation

William Winter Institute for Racial Reconciliation, "Activity Descriptions" (2005). Resources for The Children Shall Lead. 19.

https://egrove.olemiss.edu/winter_freedom_resources/19

This Report is brought to you for free and open access by the Freedom Riders: The Children Shall Lead at eGrove. It has been accepted for inclusion in Resources for The Children Shall Lead by an authorized administrator of eGrove. For more information, please contact egrove@olemiss.edu.

Activity Descriptions

(Activities were posted to an online Bulletin Board feature, much like what would later be called a Discussion Board.)

1. A Freedom Riders Letter Home

Many of the young Freedom Riders wrote moving letters back home to family and friends, describing what their journeys were like. Using what you now know about this period, imagine yourself in a similar situation and write a letter home that describes what is happening.

Please post "New Topic" to write your response to this Activity.

Please Register Before Posting to Forums

2. A Generation's Greatest Challenges

Most of the Freedom Riders were young people under the age of 25. They left their parents' homes and school to struggle for something they believed in. Today, younger generation are often characterized as being apathetic and uninterested in tackling difficult issues. We disagree. Share your thoughts on your generation's greatest challenges and what you would like to do to solve them.

Please post "New Topic" to write your response to this Activity.

Please Register Before Posting to Forums