After Rebecca interviewed Monz and I interviewed Trudy, I decided to interview Kelvin. I sat on the couch and he sat to my right in a chair. Rebecca sat opposite of Kelvin to my left. Rebecca was the recorder.

Kelvin did not appear to be very nervous, but he was not particularly talkative. He talked easily, but did not elaborate much and generally stuck to the direct question asked. Early on in the interview I was still nervous and began to roll a pen back and forth in my hands; Rebecca quickly gestured for me to stop. The phone rang a few times as well, and doors continued to be opened and shut elsewhere in the house. About halfway through the interview Rebecca also began to ask questions of Kelvin.

The room remained uncomfortably hot and the fly continued to buzz around myself and Kelvin, but not as often as it had before.
