Biographical Note

Byron Patton Harrison was born on 29 August 1881 in Crystal Springs, Mississippi. His father, a Confederate veteran, died when the child was only four years old, and a young Pat eventually hawked newspapers to supplement the family's meager income. After completing high school, Harrison attended Mississippi State College and Louisiana State University where he played baseball. His aptitude earned him a spot on the semi-professional circuit during the summer.

Harrison left college to study law, a pursuit he supported financially by teaching school at Leakesville, Mississippi. There, he opened his law practice after passing the bar in 1902. Subsequently, he served six years as district attorney for the state's second district.

In 1910, Harrison successfully campaigned as a Democrat for a seat in the U.S. House of Representatives. The young legislator quickly earned a reputation for his witty repartee in partisan debate, and Harrison proved to be an effective aide to President Woodrow Wilson. In 1918, Harrison decided to run against incumbent U.S. Senator James K. Vardaman who opposed the president's foreign policy. Emphasizing his support for Wilson, Harrison won the majority of Mississippi voters to gain the Senate seat that would remain his until death.

In 1920, the Democrats lost their majority in Congress. Republicans dubbed Harrison the "Democratic Gadfly" for his sarcastic attacks and ridicule of GOP policy, particularly the tariff and foreign policy. President Warren G. Harding labeled the Mississippi politician chief party troublemaker in the Senate. Yet despite these verbal salvos, Harrison maintained warm collegial relations with his colleagues in the opposition.

High in the council of his party, Harrison helped to arrange the nomination of James M. Cox for President (and Franklin D. Roosevelt as Vice President) in 1920. He also contributed to the presidential nomination of Al Smith in 1928. Four years later, he preserved Mississippi's nominating ballots for Franklin D. Roosevelt despite wide divisions among the state's electors.

With the return of Congress to Democratic control in 1932, Harrison transformed from gadfly to skilled legislator. Members of the Press Gallery referred to Harrison as "The Old Fox." No longer making speeches from the floor to goad the majority opposition, the Mississippi statesman became known for his cloakroom persuasive power and strategic maneuverings. As chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, he shepherded much of the New Deal legislation through Congress: the National Industrial Recovery Act, the Social Security Act, parts of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, New Deal tax legislation, and the Soldiers' Bonus Act.

Relations with President Roosevelt became strained as Harrison voiced opposition to some of the administration's fiscal policies. In 1937, the president backed Alben Barkley instead of Harrison during a close contest for Majority Leader. Losing by one vote, Harrison gracefully moved that the party's caucus unanimously elect the senator from Kentucky. Loyal to the party and the New Deal despite his reservations over selected issues, the estrangement with the administration ended when Harrison backed Roosevelt's third presidential nomination in 1940. As ranking member on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Harrison also helped to steer passage of the Lend-Lease legislation that provided arms and supplies to Britain prior to America's entrance into World War II.

In 1940, his colleagues unanimously elected Harrison President Pro Tempore of the Senate. A year later, over 2,000 people attended a reception at the Carlton Hotel to celebrate the Mississippian's thirty years in Congress, considered the largest occasion of its kind ever seen in Washington, DC.

Harrison died on 22 June 1941 in a Washington, DC hospital following an intestinal operation for cancer. His body lay in state in the Senate chambers prior to transportation back to his home in Gulfport, Mississippi where he was buried in Greenwood Cemetery. Eulogizing the senator, Roosevelt described his friend as "keen of intellect, sound in principle, shrewd in judgment [with] rare gifts of kindly wit, humor, and irony which delighted all." Harrison was survived by his wife Mary Edwina McInnis Harrison, his son Pat Harrison Jr., and his daughters Mrs. James W. Cummings and Mrs. Irvin Miller.

Scope and Content Note

The Pat Harrison Collection contains both personal and congressional records dating from 1883 through 1943, with the bulk of the material from 1919 through 1941 when Harrison represented Mississippi in the U.S. Senate. A large portion of the collection is concerned with his speeches (Harrison had a relationship with both the Redpath Speakers Bureau and the Thomas Brady Speakers Bureau which negotiated public addresses across the nation) as well as clippings; scrapbooks; original political cartoon drawings; photographs; press releases; correspondence with federal, state, and private individuals; legislation files; subject files; voting record files; trip files; invitations; and political & campaign files.

In a sense, the collection reflects Harrison's position as an oratorical gadfly against the majority Republican Party prior to the Democrats recapturing Congress in 1932. Before his party's ascendancy, the collection is dominated by files of speeches in the Senate, Mississippi, and across the country. After 1932, more substantive files on public policy issues appear, reflecting Harrison's position as chair of the Senate Finance Committee and his leadership in the passage of important New Deal legislation.

While boxes are arranged in roughly chronological order, researchers should be aware that orderly sequence begins to fail around Box 70 when material from years as early as 1915 may appear. To assist researchers, the time span for each box is provided in the finding aid.

Most, but not all of the photographs from the collection are available online as the Pat Harrison digital collection. Part of the collection also appears in a separate C.K. Berryman Cartoons digital collection which features 26 original pen-and-ink political cartoon drawings of Senator Pat Harrison by C.K. Berryman of the Washington Star.

Boxes with oversized material such as posters and scrapbooks (with content dating from 1903 to 1941) appear at the end of the container list.

Administrative Information

Acquisition Information

Pat Harrison's widow, Mary Edwina McInnis Harrison, donated the papers to the University of Mississippi in 1941-1942. In 1978, Senate Historian Richard Baker transferred four boxes of Pat Harrison files previously in the custody of the National Archives and Records Administration to Special Collections (Boxes 104-107).

Processing Information

Curators who processed the collection and created the original handwritten finding aid appear to have preserved the integrity of the filing system as it existed upon arrival at the University of Mississippi. Boxes 1 through 69 have a rough chronological arrangement dating from 1918 through 1941. However, boxes 70 through 107 (which contain material from 1883 through 1943) possess no apparent order. Boxes 108 through 116 hold oversized material.

In 2007, student assistant Suzanne Farmer completed a typed version of the original 1940s handwritten finding aid. Political Papers Archivist Leigh McWhite revised the finding aid and created introductory bibliographic notes. McWhite made further revisions to the finding aid in 2022. While contents remained in their original boxes, the description of file names were modified on the finding aid (without revising the title on the folder) and each folder received a number to assist researchers.
