Isbell's set spans 18-year career

On Saturday night, in front of hundreds of fans, Jason Isbell and The 400 Unit played a set spanning Isbell's career. Throughout the 90-minute set, Isbell joked about earlier shows at Proud Larry's and sang songs from his days in the Drive-By Truckers, his solo career and the hit film "A Star Is Born." During "Cover Me Up," the crowd cheered as Isbell sang of his recovery from alcoholism: "But I sobered up and I swore off that stuff forever, this time." The concert, which was the final performance of this year's Double Decker Arts Festival, was bookended by songs from the band's latest album, "The Nashville Sound." It opened with a forceful rendition of "Hope the High Road" and ended on the Grammy-winning love song "If We Were Vampires."

ASB executive officers sworn in on Friday

MADDY QUON
THEDMNEWS@GMAIL.COM

On Friday afternoon, as the Square prepared to host tens of thousands of visitors for Double Decker, a mile away, the newly-elected Associated Student Body leadership was inaugurated.

Standing on a raised platform in front of the Lyceum, Interim Chancellor Larry Sparks implored the new officers to prioritize the university before personal gain. "Direct your full focus and energy toward leading our student community," Sparks said. "You are the student leaders who will help us shape the future."

President Barron Mayfield, Vice President Charlotte Shackelford, Secretary Hannah Chauvin, Treasurer Gianna Schuetz, Judicial Chair Liza Boyer and Attorney General Austin Fiala were all sworn in to their new positions.

Outgoing ASB President Elam Miller also spoke at the ceremony. Miller said the executive officers he worked with over the past school year accomplished a lot and are leaving a lasting legacy on campus. Miller also noted that the new executive officers have big shoes to fill.

"I urge you to outdo us in every way possible," Miller said. "Take what we have done and grow it exponentially."

Mayfield, who was elected earlier this month after receiving 53.48% of the vote in a runoff election, ran on the campaign promise of ensuring representation on the state college board. He also said he wants to focus on increasing the students activities fee starting next fall, doubling the fee to 20 dollars.

"The amount that we would be able to do for students on campus by doubling the amount of money, the budget that we're able to distribute to these organizations, that would do a lot," Mayfield said.

Shackelford said the first thing she's going to do is to make decisions about who should serve on her

NFL DRAFT

Six former Rebels taken in NFL Draft

JOSHUA CLAYTON
THEDMSPO RTS@GMAIL.COM

The NFL Draft is all about opportunities. Of course 254 athletes get the opportunity to hear their name called over the roar of boos at Roger Goodell, but the best opportunity is for the analysts and talking heads to do what they do best: speculate wildly.

After an endless barrage mock drafts and scouting reports, the actual draft comes around and reminds everyone on the outside that we have close to no idea what's going on.

Alongside the New York Football Giants taking Daniel Jones with the No. 6 pick, D.K. Metcalf's slide into the second round was one of the biggest surprises of the weekend. No one had Greg Little and A.J. Brown going before Metcalf.

Metcalf seemed to be a top-10 pick after his majestic showing at the combine and viral photo, but he dropped to the 64th overall pick from the Seattle Seahawks amid questions of his versatility. Seattle could be a good fit for Metcalf, with Russell Wilson on a fresh new contract and No. 1 receiver Doug Baldwin considering retirement. The writing was on the wall with that video of Metcalf walking into an interview room to meet Pete Carroll shirtless, causing Carroll to immediately rip his own shirt off.

The Seahawks can give Metcalf an opportunity to do what he does best. They love

Our children and the Titanic challenge before us

JACOB GAMBRELL
 THEDMOPINION@GMAIL.COM

As I sit here writing this, my 6-week-old son Manny lies on my lap. He has been really fussy the past few days because he's recovering from an infection and doesn't feel well. As all parents know, there is nothing worse than seeing your child in pain. His cries and whimpers and tear-soaked eyes create within me a new type of sadness that I have never felt before. Whether through evolution or divine creation, parents' brains are re-wired when they hold their child for the first time. It creates a new perspective of the future, a new timescale that goes beyond the 50 or 60 years we have left.

As I look into his big brown eyes, full of curiosity and innocence, I worry about the pain he will have to endure in the future and my complicity in the creation of that pain. All of us — you, me and 6-week-old Manny — are on the Titanic, moving at full speed ahead towards a massive iceberg.

Some don't care because they will be dead before we hit the iceberg, or are making tons of money in our current iceberg-bound course. Some, whether due to a lack of access to education or willful ignorance, cannot yet see the iceberg or understand the gravity of the danger it presents. And some people see the iceberg and know they must change course and reroute the Titanic before it's too late.

Last fall, the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change announced that we have 11 years to halve global CO2 emissions and 31 years to reach net zero emissions or else global temperatures will exceed a 1.5 degree Celsius increase from pre-industrial temperatures or 0.5 degrees Celsius from current-day temperatures. No, that does not mean that the world is ending in 11 years as some have, in bad faith, mischaracterized the warnings and rhetoric of people like congresswoman Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez.

It means we have 11 years to change the course of the Titanic. After 2030, when Manny will be just a fifth grader, it will be too late to change the course of the Earth and we will strike the iceberg and face the consequences.

Will he inherit the barren husk of the planet I inherited? Will he get to experience the wonders of nature as in the past two years alone? Half of the coral in the Great Barrier Reef has died due to increased temperatures. Ask your parents about how many bugs they used to clean off their windshields compared to today as global insect biomass is decreasing at 2.5% per year and may disappear completely by 2100.

Will my son be able to visit New Orleans, or will one more massive hurricane put parts of it, or Gulfport or Miami, submerged underwater forever?

Will he develop asthma from the smoke inhalation from climate change boosted wildfires?

Our planet is dying before our eyes, and Manny will reap the consequences of our action.

Just like the Titanic, the wealthy first class have their lifeboats. They will have no difficulty accessing resources and hiring Pinkertons to protect those resources. Climate change will hurt poor and middle-class people the most, and millions will find themselves as climate refugees, forced to flee their homes due to drought, famine, storms, floods or fire.

While I try to decrease my carbon footprint, I still drive my car and eat meat. I contribute to climate change, but individual actions will not save us. We need collective action and bold, transformative policies, or Manny's generation will never forgive us as their now innocent and unaware eyes will witness firsthand the sinking of the Titanic.

legislative council. She finished interviewing candidates for her legislative council last Friday and plans to make her final decisions today.

The legislative council serves under the vice president and is comprised of eight positions ranging from legislation monitor to Senate campus liaison. Their primary charge is to liaise between the executive branch and the Senate and ensure that passed legislation is properly enacted.

Shackelford said that she plans on increasing transparency between the Senate and the university by reaching out to the student body more often than has been done in the past.

"I've planned on having a newsletter go out to registered student organization presidents," Shackelford said. "I've been working on figuring out whether or not we should use something— just in general what's the best way to get things done."

Mayfield added that he also wants to revise the ASB Code and Constitution, starting with the election portion, in order to make the inner workings of ASB more accessible to every student.

"The whole code needs a reformat, but I want to rewrite places here and there to make it more easy to understand," Mayfield said. "There are places in the elections part of the code that contradict themselves."

Mayfield said he's not going to waste any time, and that he's going to get to work immediately this summer.

"We'll probably spend a lot of the summer, obviously, planning events and programming and stuff like that, spend a lot of time researching that rewrite of the code," Mayfield said. "As the fall gets underway and we get students back on campus, we'll really see how they're feeling about the student activities fee."

In parting, Miller wished the new officers luck as they begin their new leadership roles.

"I hope you are ready to surpass us. I hope you're ready to live by the Creed closely, to put others' needs ahead of your own, and to love the University of Mississippi fiercely, protectively, wholly, even as you acknowledge that it can always be improved," Miller said.

Barron Mayfield is sworn in as Associated Student Body president on Friday afternoon.

Hot off the press: yearbooks are here

TAYLOR VANCE
THEDMNEWS@GMAIL.COM

The 2018-2019 editorial staff of "The Ole Miss" yearbook homed in on the small details of the city and the university that often get overlooked to portray their importance to the community, centering the yearbook around the theme "Between the Lines." "We wanted to inspire students to think about the small details of their time at the university and remember them in the years to come," Mackenzie Ross, editor-in-chief of The Ole Miss yearbook said. "In 30 years, we'll all remember the big details, but it's the receptionists in your schools or the crossing guard that may make your day and we want to commemorate that. You'll see a lot of features on those people, places and events in the book this year."

Ross said it was an interesting year to produce a yearbook centered around the theme with the increased amount of news that happened on campus and drew national attention to the university.

"We have had a lot of change on campus this year, so we had to make sure we were up to date on it all and that it all made it in the book," she said. "News about the Confederate statue began around the time of our final deadline, so I worked closely with my editorial team to make sure that was included in the book."

Ross said the biggest challenge was picking what went in the book. She said the stories kept changing throughout the year, but she is incredibly proud of the finished product.

Yearbooks will be available in The Pavilion from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. today through Thursday.

Students must present a valid student ID to receive a yearbook, and they do not have to pay anything to receive their respective copies as long as they were enrolled in classes and have paid tuition for both the fall and spring semesters of the 2018-19 academic year.

Students who have only paid for one semester will have to pay $25 to receive a yearbook. Non-students, law students and faculty or staff members will have to pay $50.

This is the 122nd edition of "The Ole Miss." In 1897, students held a contest to name the yearbook, and "The Ole Miss" was selected. It is the first known reference of Ole Miss in relation to the university.

Megan Suttles, the current photography editor and incoming editor-in-chief, said this book serves as a capsule to make sure nothing that happens on the Ole Miss campus is forgotten about over time—no matter how large or small it is.

"In 30 years, people will be able to look back on this yearbook and see the story about the crossing guard by Farley (Hall) and say, 'Hey, I remember him! He was such a great guy,'" Suttles said. "Because of that, this book really means a lot to me, because being able to make small things into something memorable and meaningful is how you can really paint a beautiful picture of Ole Miss."

Suttles said taking pictures of many newsworthy events this year made her feel even more honored than she already was to act as the 2018-19 photo editor.

"I captured the emotions of people in my community who were standing by each other and fighting for their beliefs, and the only emotion that I felt was contentment from being able document those moments through my eyes," Suttles said. "Being able to take pictures of newsworthy events and important people, such as the interim chancellor, is what helped me learn and grow as a photographer by helping me find my confidence."

Ross and Suttles both said they hope when people look back on this yearbook in the future, they will be reminded of the small experiences that happened throughout the year in addition to the major events.

"I hope they see familiar faces and think back to the small but best memories of their year at Ole Miss," Ross said. "It's such a unique and beautiful campus, and I know I've made my best memories here."

to run play-action and get their receivers to run underneath Wilson's deep passes 30 to 40 yards downfield. There are not many receivers in the draft class that can win in those situations like D.K.

Back down at the line of scrimmage, Greg Little came off the board early in the second round with the 37th pick by the Carolina Panthers. His work now will go towards protecting quarterback Cam Newton from the pass-rushers of the NFC South, following the footsteps of fellow former Rebel and Panther Michael Oher.

There were rumblings about Little's work ethic and edge prior to the draft, which may be the reason he was picked in the second round and not the first, but a huge, athletic tackle with a high ceiling will always be something NFL teams take a chance on.

A.J. Brown will join Marcus Mariota and Corey Davis in the Tennessee Titans' passing attack after being drafted in the second round with the 51st pick. The Titans don't have many big names across their receiver depth chart, so A.J. could contribute immediately for that team trying to get back into the playoffs.

Dawson Knox will head up north after being picked 96th overall by the Buffalo Bills. Knox could be a steal for the Bills, but it will be interesting to see how they use him with Josh Allen under center. Knox didn't hesitate to get on board, posting a video of his friend jumping through a table in true Bills Mafia fashion.

One small surprise was seeing offensive lineman Javon Patterson go to the Indianapolis Colts in the seventh round. He'll be joined by Chad Kelly, who was signed on Sunday according to the Athletic.

Ken Webster was drafted by the New England Patriots, who have a knack for turning late-round picks into solid NFL players.

Jordan Ta'amu and Zedrick Woods were not Offensive lineman Greg Little was the first former Rebel to be drafted last weekend, going to the Carolina Panthers as the 37th pick.

drafted, but Ta'amu is reportedly getting interest from the Raiders and Texans while Woods signed a deal with the Jaguars. Wide receiver DaMarkus Lodge signed with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

Next up for these players will be rookie training camp in mid-July. Players like A.J. Brown and Greg Little will have a basically guaranteed spot on the 53-man roster, but others will need to show the coaches something in training camp and preseason to earn the spot.
