Dear Jim:

Your bantering reprimand for my statement in the current newsletter that you resigned because of "ill health" makes me realize, as I should have known before, that one should check original sources before making such statements. I'm sorry if it embarrassed you, but I can only say that I had understood that you were most seriously ill, a few weeks ago, and I assumed that your asking to be relieved of administrative duties was tied in with that. I am most pleased to learn from you that you are feeling fine again and that your alleged "ill health" had nothing to do with it.

Thanks for "calling" me on this error in such a nice way.

Cordially,

Marvin M Black
