Dear Jim,

I have just been reading your account of the origin of the hardwood lumbermen's trade association in the 954. I think it's good. I have a graduate student who is working on trade associations in the cotton textile industry, and I had already come to the conclusion that trade associations are a field in which more work would be worthwhile. But here is at least one that you have wrapped up very effectively.

A note from Joe Mathews recently said that your health is somewhat better now, and I certainly hope that is so. I was distressed to learn at Christmas that you had been in such bad shape, and I hope you are better now and will be steadily on the mend. I have promised to be at the Nashville meeting in the fall, and it would be good if you and Joe and Dutch and I could all put our feet under the same table again after so long a time.

Best regards to all of you, and how is that Harvard man of yours? I have three friends with sons at Harvard. If I were really a Yale man, I would be quite hallowed up about this.

yours,

Dave.
