

University of Mississippi

eGrove

Clippings

James W. Silver Collection

December 2018

Nina's Notes

Author Unknown

Follow this and additional works at: https://egrove.olemiss.edu/jws_clip

Recommended Citation

Unknown, Author, "Nina's Notes" (2018). Clippings. 266.

https://egrove.olemiss.edu/jws_clip/266

This Book is brought to you for free and open access by the James W. Silver Collection at eGrove. It has been accepted for inclusion in Clippings by an authorized administrator of eGrove. For more information, please contact egrove@olemiss.edu.

through the years that I have known him, not too well for our paths have crossed few times, in fact, I guess fewer than with just about anyone else in Oxford and at Ole Miss, I have admired the man for his seemingly untiring efforts to promote the Law School at Ole Miss. There are perhaps those who have not agreed with him on every issue, but even these and certainly none who have known and worked with him through the years could ever have doubted his loyalty to the Law School at Ole Miss. Under his direction and supervision the Law School at Ole Miss has reached an enviable position and is rated second to none throughout the entire Southland. He has searched for and kept for his school some of the best law professors to be found anywhere. He has spent a lifetime teaching and interpreting the "laws of the land" to and for, thousands of Ole Miss students who have registered for his classes.

(See NINA'S NOTES on Page 6)

* * *

"30" WILL BE written to another chapter in the History of Oxford and Ole Miss as Dr. Robert J. Farley, Dean of the Ole Miss Law School resigns his position and moves to Florida. There are many, I among them, who wonder why such a law would ever be passed that would force a man to leave a position he had executed so brilliantly up to that point. Sure, most men as they reach 65 years of age, seemingly, are far from the sunset years of their life.

Our very best wishes to Dr. Farley as he continues his work, only in new surroundings. Oxford and Ole Miss are again the losers.

More than forty years ago a young man, the youngest ever to serve before or since in the same position, was elected Mayor of Oxford. Folks at Oxford and at Ole Miss, in fact those who knew him from over the entire county, so the story is told to me, were mighty proud of him. He was ambitious, eager to learn and to serve the area in which he lived. Down

Nina's Notes