Would an ad like this catch your eye? Would it spark a dream of far away places? No, TRB&S does not run advertisements of this kind, but now it is possible to turn such a dream into reality. The rapid development of our International Group has created a growing demand for experienced people eager to work in other countries. A number of U.S.A. personnel already have seized this opportunity, as shown by the pictures on these pages. There are openings for more such people... perhaps not in Thailand, but in Europe, South America, the Caribbean area, wherever TRB&S offices can be found.

The men shown on these pages are on temporary assignment to our member firms in France, Japan and Puerto Rico. Each will work in the other country for two years or more, bringing to the member firm his experience in U.S.A. auditing standards and procedures, and at the same time gaining valuable experience in the business practices of his host country. The experience of living and working in another country is much more than an opportunity to learn a new language. It is an opportunity to observe and understand a different culture and different business practices. With U.S. businesses moving into international ventures at an unbelievable rate, this experience will be extremely valuable. When these people return to the U.S.A., each will find an office eager to have him.

What kind of people are wanted for this program? Above all, they should be eager for the exciting experiences of living and working in a strange country. Husband and wife must be willing to learn a new language, to honor new customs, and to adapt to different living conditions. Many adjustments are necessary, but the rewards are great.

Interested? Write to the International Coordinating Office in New York and see if there is a place waiting for you!

Herbert Sprague of our Philadelphia office will be assigned to one of our member firms in Latin America later this year. His regular Spanish lessons under the firm's program with Berlitz are supplemented by his wife's instruction at home.

from San Francisco to Tokyo

David J. Nagao worked in our offices in Honolulu and San Francisco before accepting an assignment in Tokyo. While he worked to obtain qualification as a CPA in Japan, Dave was considering another important change in his life, and when he left San Francisco he took with him a bride. Yumi and Dave have had a very demanding first year, but have succeeded in learning much of the language and culture of Japan.

Just around the corner from the Nagao's apartment is the Otori Shrine. In the traditional gesture of visitors "cleansing themselves," Yumi stops at the shrine's water well to rinse her hands and mouth.

In the Tokyo office, R. Tani of our associate's staff shows Dave how to use an abacus.

Everywhere in Tokyo you see the blend of the Western and Oriental cultures and traditions. At a nearby market, Yumi and a fellow shopper in native dress look over the grocer's stock.

Even in the winter, a stroll along the Champ de Mars can be fun with the exciting Eiffel Tower in view.

Having purchased a few staples of life in Paris, Barbara and Ben stop at a newsstand before returning to their apartment.

The weekly grocery shopping can be a new experience. A net shopping bag is used to accumulate the many items to be carried home from the neighborhood sidewalk market.

from Milwaukee to Paris

Benjamin Case and his attractive wife, Barbara, found the transition from Milwaukee to Paris a little difficult at first, but increasing confidence with the language and the helpfulness of our associates in Paris soon made them feel at home. Now they enjoy the city during the week, its environs on weekends, and the rest of Europe during vacations.

In an area of ideal flying weather, Roger has realized a life-long desire to earn his pilot's license.

With Angel Ramos and Victor Vega of the San Juan office, Roger is dwarfed by some of the equipment of Rexach Construction Company, one of the office's largest clients.

Not all of the clients in San Juan are new to Roger. This Sears Roebuck store is comparable in size to the bigger stores in the States.

from Pittsburgh to San Juan

The icy winters of Pittsburgh are almost forgotten by P. Roger Fetterolf. Last spring, Roger was invited to join the staff of our member firm in San Juan. Any doubts he may have had before accepting are now gone. Roger has found the work varied and challenging, and he is making the most of the many opportunities for year-round recreational activities.
