MISSION STATEMENT

Asia-Pacific Journal of Accounting (APJA) is dedicated to the advancement of knowledge in all fields of accounting through the publication of high quality, scholarly papers grounded in theory. Articles should be theoretical, empirical, analytical or historical and demonstrate relevance of topic and readability of content.

EDITORIAL POLICY

Papers are encouraged which explore theoretical foundations of issues, methodological improvements in empirical work, and generalizability of findings. In-depth and rigorous study of contemporary topics are also welcome. Papers which expose analytical tractability for its own sake are discouraged. Capital markets and related studies should demonstrate originality as well as some relevance to the Asian region. Where applicable, submissions should attach prior reviewers' comments to facilitate APJA's review process.

MANUSCRIPT GUIDELINES

General

Three copies of a paper should be submitted, together with, in the case of non-subscribers only, a submission fee of US $35. Manuscripts currently under review by other publications should not be submitted. All submissions are subject to a double-blind review process using experienced international referees. To ensure maximum anonymity in the review process, authors must not identify themselves directly or indirectly on the paper. Papers submitted should have benefited from exposure in workshops, seminars, conferences and with colleagues. Authors will be required to sign a copyright release form as a condition of publication. Authors will be asked to submit the final version of their paper on diskette.

CALL FOR PAPERS

ACCOUNTING CASE WRITING COMPETITION

Sponsored by

The Accounting Education Resource Centre and

The Journal of Accounting Case Research of the University of Lethbridge Cases must be unpublished manuscripts which incorporate accounting topics and related material. Accounting is broadly defined to include financial accounting, managerial accounting, auditing, taxation and related finance topics. All cases submitted for the first time to The Journal of Accounting Case Research during the period between March 2, 1992 and April 30, 1994 will be considered for a prize. Case authors must be prepared to have their cases published in The Journal of Accounting Case Research at the discretion of the editor and the reviewers. Cases should be accompanied by a Teaching Note or Instructors' Guide which includes an overview of the issues in the case, suggestions for use of the case and a set of guidelines for dealing with the issues raised in the case. An epilogue which indicates what actually happened is also desirable, though not necessary. Cases should be based upon real events or situations although they can be disguised. Any case based upon real events that uses proprietary information must have permission from the source of that information. Cases based upon published information only must be certified to be so by their authors. Fictional cases must be so stipulated. While there is no length restriction, most cases should not exceed 30 pages double-spaced, exclusive of teaching notes. Short cases of only a few pages will get equal consideration along with more lengthy ones. The journal strives to provide a balance of short, medium and long cases in each of its issues.

All cases must be received by the Editor, The Journal of Accounting Case Research, Faculty of Management, The University of Lethbridge, 4401 University Drive, Lethbridge, Alberta, T1K 3M4, Canada, before April 30, 1994. All finalists will be notified of their position in writing by June 30, 1994. Prize winners will be announced no later than September 1994. Notification of acceptance for publication in the journal will follow the normal editorial review process which takes about two to three months after receipt of the case.

First Prize will be $6,000 U.S. Second Prize will be $3,000 U.S. Third Prize will be $1,500 U.S. All other finalists will receive $500 U.S. Prizes will only be awarded to cases of suitable quality for publication.

All cases submitted will be considered for publication in The Journal of Accounting Case Research. Authors of cases that are accepted for publication, whether finalists or not, will be notified of the reviewers' comments and provided the opportunity of amending their cases for publication. All cases published will be subject to normal copy editing by the publisher, Captus Press Inc. At least one of the authors of a case to be published must be a subscriber to the journal, or a submission fee of $60 U.S. will be charged prior to publication. All cases published in the journal are subject to unlimited use in classes of instruction by subscribers of the journal without payment of royalties. The use of cases published by the journal in books and other media will be subject to a nominal royalty to be negotiated with the journal.
