

8-1-2002

A Fable

Ann Fisher-Wirth

Follow this and additional works at: <https://egrove.olemiss.edu/yr>

Recommended Citation

Fisher-Wirth, Ann (2002) "A Fable," Yalobusha Review: Vol. 7 , Article 12.
Available at: <https://egrove.olemiss.edu/yr/vol7/iss1/12>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the English at eGrove. It has been accepted for inclusion in Yalobusha Review by an authorized editor of eGrove. For more information, please contact egrove@olemiss.edu.

Ann Fisher-Wirth

A Fable

Why try to explain?
She walked outside
into a field of stars
where he stood waiting at the black edge of the pine trees.
She married the bear.
Again and again his glistening
flesh sinks into her fur.
Smoke rises from the village fires.
They beat pots to ward off evil.