Dear Sir:-

As you no doubt know, the annual convention of The American Association of Public Accountants will be held in Washington, during the third week in September, beginning Monday, September 14th.

While this meeting is held under the auspices of the American Association itself, and not by invitation of any particular state society, yet your committee can assure you that a very pleasant time is in store for those attending the meeting. Washington and its environs hold many attractions, and two of the neighboring societies (Virginia and Maryland) have consented to conduct members to some of these.

Headquarters will be established at the New Willard; and to those familiar with Washington nothing more need be said. We enclose one of the hotel booklets, and suggest that you engage your apartments at once, as we expect a large attendance.

The only tax made upon the membership for this convention will be the usual fee of five dollars ($5.00) for banquet. The committee, however, reserves the right to substitute one or more other features to take the place of the formal banquet.

This notice will be followed shortly by another announcement which will include a tentative programme. At present we hope to include among the features a White House reception, Mount Vernon trip (installation of new officers), Annapolis and Naval Academy, old southern dinners, etc.

That part of the programme which will include addresses, discussions, etc. will, we believe, fully measure up to the usual high standard set by our association.

Formal attendance blanks and return cards will be included in our next notice; but your committee would greatly appreciate your informal notification of intention to attend upon receipt of this notice. We also would welcome any suggestions.

Very truly yours,

COMMITTEE ON ANNUAL MEETING.
