Dear Jim,

I treasure specially our fortunate meeting and the chance to have your words about things of importance. I hope you found all well when you got home and that the immediate future will not be full of too many difficulties.

I hope you go ahead and write about all these matters. In the meantime I have taken the liberty, in confidence, of speaking to The Sunday Times, with whom we are associated, because publication there would be handsomely paid as well as of prodigious influence. A very suitable arrangement would be for The Sunday Times publication as well as a daily version in "The Scotsman", and perhaps some other British daily newspaper. It is very likely I could arrange all this, but of course I am saying nothing widely about the possibility until you decide what you would want to do. There is, of course, important book publication later also.

I thought you might like to see the two items I have written for the paper so far, as a direct result of the trip. One is a ponderous political item and the other is something of a frivolity.

It was good to have the opportunity of meeting the Murphys through you. - a pleasant family.

Warm regards to you all.

Yours ever,

Alastair
