THE MINSTREL
TO HIS STEED.

J. Catnach, Printer, 2, & 3, Monmouth-court,
7 Dials

THEN up and prepare thee! my own brave
The rays on the fountain-play: (steed,
Thy master hath need of thy well-train'd speed

So, up, my brave steed, and away!

With my ready lute o'er my shoulder thrown,
For my leige lord's bridal day,

I must hie at his call, ere the morn be flown,

So, up, my brave steed, and away!

Then, up, and prepare, &c

I know, when before my prince I kneel,

I know what he'll smile and say;

There's a well-turn'd heel and a heart of zeal,

And a joyous minstrel lay.

And for thee oh, the fairest in all the land,

Shall welcome my gallant grey,

And the soft caress of her snow-white hand

Shall all thy toils repay.

Then, up, and prepare, &c.
