Suspicious package found in parking lot of Oxford Mall Sunday evening

THOMAS GRANING | The Daily Mississippian

Officials block access to the Oxford Mall while investigating a suspicious package Sunday, July 14.

BY PETE PORTER
tjporter@go.olemiss.edu

An investigation continues after a strange package was found in the Oxford Mall parking lot Sunday evening. Deputy Chief Kevin Stark of the Oxford Police Department said, "At approximately 6:30 p.m. the Oxford Police Department received a call about a suspicious package in the parking lot of the Oxford Mall."

The Oxford Mall as well as surrounding businesses were evacuated after the package was found outside the Malco Oxford Studio Cinema.

"I was watching a movie when a Malco employee came in and told everyone to evacuate immediately," said Sigl, a junior criminal justice major from Atlanta, Ga. "We were led out the back door, then along the side of the building where we were able to get up the hill and away from the buildings."

Sigl said he was surprised by how calm everyone remained throughout the situation, especially the Malco employees.

All of those in the mall at the time of the threat were evacuated out the back doors of the businesses and taken along the side of the building to safety according to Austin Sigl, who was watching a movie at the Malco when he was told to evacuate.

"Everyone was relatively calm the whole time," Sigl said. "The employees especially were relaxed and led us out of the building quickly and efficiently. No one was running for the exits or anything like that, there were just a lot of phone calls being made to friends and family."

Sigl added that after being evacuated around 7:05 p.m., he and the rest of the evacu-

Oxford, rest of nation react to Zimmerman ruling

BY MICHAEL QUIRK & PETE PORTER
mwquirk@go.olemiss.edu
tjporter@go.olemiss.edu

As George Zimmerman was ruled not guilty on Saturday people across Oxford and the nation responded.

Many, including University of Mississippi student Meredith Parker, are outraged by the decision.

"I was pretty upset because I feel like there was a lot of racial profiling that took place and I tried to do research on it because I didn't want the verdict to be true," said Parker, a senior biology major from Jackson. "I wanted to be wrong. The more and more research I did, the more unjust the whole situation was."

After the jury ruled Zimmerman not guilty on Saturday, a candlelight vigil was held by the William Winter Institute for Racial Reconciliation at the James Meredith statue on campus.

This response to the ruling was one of many across the nation on Sunday.

Some advocates want federal civil rights charges against Zimmerman, who was acquitted Saturday in Martin's 2012 shooting death. The Justice Department has said it's considering whether federal prosecutors should file criminal civil rights charges now that Zimmerman has been acquitted in the state case. The department opened an investigation into Martin's death last year but stepped aside to allow the state prosecution to proceed.

There are mixed emotions as this case has almost divided the country into a debate on the ruling. Many, such as senior Gloria Briggs, have used social media as a way to learn more about the case as well as express their opinion on the subject.

Off-campus housing rushes to complete construction

BY MICHAEL BORKEY
jmborkey@go.olemiss.edu

As The University of Mississippi continues to increase its student body, a greater need for off-campus student housing has developed. Housing projects have begun springing up all over Oxford, including The Retreat, The Hub and Highland Square. But as these housing developments continue building, the move-in dates are quickly approaching and some students wonder whether or not they will have a home by Aug. 26.

Outsourcing needs to change: Bangladesh is evidence

BY TRAVIS OFFIELD
tjoffiel@go.olemiss.edu

In Bangladesh, outsourcing and its resulting pollution handcuff society's potential to reverse direction on a track that is leading them nowhere fast.

India's neighbor is rich with cheap labor and acrid odors, but you would be hard-pressed to find a glass of clean drinking water there. In a country where the GDP-per capita is, to be generous, less than stellar, how can so much pollution overwhelm the nation's air and water supply? Surely there are not hundreds of thousands of first-world vehicles depositing flatulence on the roads of Bangladesh. Maybe the western market monsters like Wal-Mart and J.C. Penney have some insight to Bangladesh's pollution problem, considering their bountiful numbers of manufacturing and textile factories in the nation.

From a business standpoint, this outsourcing makes complete sense. Labor is so cheap in Bangladesh that you would probably call it working for free here in the United States. Also, regulation of pollution seems to be nonexistent, meaning no expensive and time-consuming safety precautions or cleanup procedures. Instead, workers slave away in deadly conditions for pennies a day and the toxic waste products of their efforts drain into the streams and rivers where they will eventually flow into village drinking wells.

On the opposite hand the economically savvy practices of western companies is the reality of Bangladesh – a country which would otherwise be aesthetically brilliant where the people are born into awful conditions and given no route to escape poverty and a life sentence working in a sweat shop.

Albeit highly unlikely, the best solution to the problem of outsourcing would be to eliminate the practice altogether. However, there are factors at play (particularly the depth of the pockets of lobbyists on Capitol Hill) that present nearly unmovable obstacles in the efforts of improving conditions in Bangladesh and other countries like it. Manufacturing companies' weight in gold can be measured in the toxic sludge oozing through the riverbeds of third-world countries like Bangladesh, so any legislation pertaining to the regulation of their practices will likely be sponsored by a hedge-fund and overflowing with loop-hole riddled jargon aimed more at making peasants like me shut up than contributing to the humane issues at hand.

Despite what will likely be a long if not infinite road to improvement for Bangladesh and third world countries, their SOS calls have been heard and the status quo must be moved.

Aren't there bigger issues here?

BY TRENTON WINFORD
tgwinford@bellsouth.net

As I'm sure just about everyone is aware, George Zimmerman was found not guilty of second degree murder of Trayvon Martin in Sanford, Fla. The case and subsequent trial have been in the spotlight since the beginning, fueled by the mainstream media's incessant coverage.

After the verdict, mainstream and social media erupted, mainly with anger at the outcome. Death threats, against Zimmerman or anyone who supported the verdict, filled up the Twitter feed. I just had to stop and think: Aren't there bigger issues at play here?

First, what makes this case so worthy of all of the media attention it has received? If it is because a young man lost his life, then what about the other 1000 teenagers who were murdered last year? If it is because Martin was black, then what about the more than 6000 black individuals who were murdered last year?

Second, the media either misrepresented or was completely inaccurate about the facts of the case from the first reports to the trial. Immediately following the shooting, the media claimed that Zimmerman was a white man, only to find out later that he is half-white-half-Hispanic. Next, reports came out that Zimmerman did not sustain any injuries during the altercation before having to issue corrections since Zimmerman was in fact injured, according to police reports and photographs. Further, NBC News and MSNBC deliberately edited Zimmerman's call to the police dispatcher to make Zimmerman sound explicitly racist.

Third, the reactions to the shooting, coverage, trial and final verdict were appalling. As mentioned, death threats were directed at Zimmerman, the jurors, and even journalists who were considered to support the not guilty verdict. Some individual tweeted that they would accidentally kill a white person to see what would happen. Where is the uproar over these reactions?

Fourth, many blacks banded together to support supposed justice for Martin, claiming that the entire black race was under attack. The movement clung to the image of Martin as a good student who was simply minding his own business. I wonder if the movement would have gained such footing if the media had accurately reported that Martin had traces of marijuana in his system and was only in Sanford with his father because he had been suspended from school. Later pictures were revealed from Martin's phone which showed him posing with guns. However, this is not the image of Martin that fueled the us-versus-them crowd, even after the verdict.

In my opinion, so many other issues should have been discussed that were largely ignored by the media. Perhaps it is because covering these other issues did not sell views and reads like the hate crime and innocent Martin did.

In expressing this opinion over social media, some responded to me saying that I could not possibly understand the issues simply because I was white. Maybe beliefs such as those are part of the problem. Regardless, Americans should focus on the bigger issues at play, and maybe we can start to truly move forward.

much, but I learned about it through Twitter and I was kind of shocked to hear he wasn't guilty," said Briggs, an integrated marketing communications major from Minnetonka, Minn.

Others like Crimens Clifford chose to stay away from social media in order to avoid the never-ending amount of opinions on the subject as well as conflict with peers.

"After I heard the verdict, my first thought was to stay off social media so that my views wouldn't be misconstrued by arguments and comments by my peers," said Clifford, a senior print journalism major from Samford, NC.

One common claim about the case is that Zimmerman was acquitted because the case was about a black teen, making the case a white vs. black issue. However, student Tobi Olayemi thinks there is more to the story.

"I feel like most black people were like 'this is a white against black thing' but technically Zimmerman is Hispanic. It's not a black or white thing. There are lots of sides to the story," said Olayemi, a junior biology major from Nigeria.

Among the cities that saw protests were New York, Los Angeles, Miami, Atlanta, Milwaukee, Philadelphia and Washington, D.C.

Rallies were mainly peaceful nationwide as demonstrators expressed their support for 17-year-old Trayvon Martin's family and protested the ruling, though some violence did

President Barack Obama, Rev. Al Sharpton and the Rev. Jesse Jackson have urged calm during a time that has already seen violence. In Oakland, Calif., during protests that began late Saturday night, some angry demonstrators broke windows, burned U.S. flags, vandalized a police squad car and spray-painting anti-police graffiti.

But not all demonstrations have been out of anger. At a service in Sanford, Fla., where Zimmerman was tried, teens wearing shirts with Martin's picture wiped away tears during a church sermon held in Martin's honor.

Construction at The Retreat on Anderson Road

development located on Molly Barr Road, appears to be behind in its development progression.

“They have repeatedly pushed back the date for us to see a model, and for us that’s frustrating because no one wants to move into a place they can’t see,” said Amanda Simpson, a junior English major from Oxford. “They’ve obviously taken on more than they can handle.”

Simpson, who is set to move into the complex Aug. 12, said the disorganization of the project has proven the unreliability of the Highland Square management.

“When we signed our lease in February, we were told we could get out of the lease if we wanted to. But when we went to get out of our lease in June, they wouldn’t let us,” said Simpson. “They changed management and changed their policy.” Simpson added that there will be no early move-in, which was scheduled for Aug. 1, and that only those whose housing is finished will be able to move in on Aug. 12.

A representative of the company did release this statement: “Highland Square is on schedule to open prior to the start of fall classes. As with any project this size and scale, completion of the project occurs in phases with some parts of the project completing earlier than others. We are contacting students to let them know when their unit will be ready for move-in and will do our best to accommodate any students who need to move in before their unit will be completed.”

The Hub at Oxford, located off Anderson Road, is also scheduled to open this fall semester and will house 582 residents. Student and future Hub resident Corinne Vance knew she wanted to live there before her virtual tour was over.

“Honestly I chose The Hub because I started looking late in the game,” said Vance, a integrated marketing communications major from Clarksdale. “My options were limited, but then I heard The Hub had a few openings left. I knew that’s where I wanted to live even before I’d finished the virtual tour.”

The office of The Hub also confirmed to its residents that the project will be complete on schedule for move-in day in August. However, Vance stated that she was informed that while the interiors of the houses are finished, the exterior of the houses are still under construction.

“If I am not going to be able to move in August 1, I am going to be very upset,” Vance said. “I haven’t really thought of a back-up plan, so I really hope they are finished on time. As long as I can move in, I don’t have any problem putting up with a little work outside.”

The Hub management did not offer a statement.

The Retreat, located on Anderson Road, is a 168-unit neighborhood-style community which will house 668 students.

The office of The Retreat confirmed that they will be completed right on schedule for the residents to move in on time.

“Driving through the neighborhood made me feel a little bit better about it,” said junior Bradley Bynum, a future resident of The Retreat. “It looks really good. Seems like they’re almost done.”

The Retreat is owned and managed by a company called EdR, or Education Reality. EdR is located in Memphis, Tenn., and the company’s close proximity to Oxford allows it to keep track of the city’s market and trends for the future.

“EdR is always watching the growth of Ole Miss,” said Hannah McEuen, The Retreat’s community manager. “We are familiar with the university and know it is a popular place for college-bound students.”

Before EdR made the final decision on its $37.6 million investment of The Retreat, the company went through a “rigorous investigation” of the city and university.

“Having done the investigation, we were convinced that The University of Mississippi is a great market for growth and, in particular, a cottage-style collegiate community,” said McEuen.

One problem that can come with opening a new property for college students is they don’t have anything to show while under construction, making it harder to convince students to live there. To combat this problem, The Retreat focused its marketing and leasing strategy on the internet, giving digital renderings and construction updates as the project progressed.

“The simulations we created in our virtual tours were so life-like that potential residents got a realistic view of what it would be like to live here,” McEuen said. “Coupled with construction updates on Facebook and Twitter and on-site ‘dusty boot tours’ with our leasing staff, students and their families had the confidence needed to sign a lease on an unfinished building.”

ees were kept on site until 7:40 p.m. once names and phone numbers had been collected.

Businesses around the mall were evacuated as well, including Pizza Hut, which is located in front of the mall on Jackson Avenue. Employee Aussie Warren believes the situation was a prank rather than a serious threat.

“I think it’s some little kids trying to have some fun, it’s the middle of summer,” Warren said. “Who’s going to put a bomb in Oxford? There’s no one here.”

Stark said the responding officers deemed the package suspicious based on the circumstances. The area was secured and assistance was requested from the Tupelo Bomb Squad. There were no injuries to report.

“Once on scene the Tupelo Bomb Squad checked the package and deemed it safe,” said a statement from the OPD. “The Oxford Police Department and the University Police Department are continuing to investigate the incident.”

Other agencies that responded to the scene included the FBI, ATF, the Oxford Fire Department and Oxford Emergency Management.

Andrew Cedermark comes to Lamar Lounge on Wednesday night

BY EMILY CRAWFORD
thedmfeatures@gmail.com

Hailing from the New York lo-fi tape scene, Andrew Cedermark couldn't have picked a better town than Oxford to make a stop Wednesday, July 17 at 9 p.m. This is just another stop on his current tour of the South that heads to Athens next.

His second album, "Home Life," is set to release today, and Cedermark has successfully given a voice to all the townies out there who struggle with that ambivalent feeling of knowing it's time to grow up, but are not entirely sure what that means.

With his 2012 album, "Moon Deluxe," receiving an 8.2 on Pitchfork, it's no surprise that Cedermark's upcoming album has received good reviews from music critics.

"Home Life" is exactly what the listener is expecting due to the album's title, in a familiar and reassuring way. Cedermark's ability to show listeners what he calls home, including experiences and memories, turn into a mirror of the listener's life and the feelings they struggle with. Tracks like "At Home" and "Memories, Ah," are an ode to that place we all have deep in our hearts. Though Cedermark's lyrics are so personal, it is easy to relate to the disappointment most find in their hometowns coupled with the way we cherish the memories and the people there.

With the success of Oxford-native band Bass Drum of Death's new self-titled album released last week and their show at Proud Larry's Friday, Oxonians have continuously made it clear that there is a deep respect for those who can play a bar with simple chords and simple lyrics. These musicians thrive because audiences know that it is just, simply put, damn good music.

And Andrew Cedermark is no exception.

Though Cedermark's newer music is different from his previous indie punk band, Titus Andronicus, his turn to indie melancholic rock has been a move in a good direction.

A direction that makes "Home Life" great to listen to live and in your car.

Cedermark may have switched genres but his music sustains a vibe that keeps people listening.

Check him out Wednesday at 9 p.m. at Lamar Lounge.

Cory Monteith, 'Glee' actor, found dead

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Cory Monteith, the heartthrob actor who became an overnight star as a high school quarterback-turned-singer in the hit TV series "Glee" but had battled addiction since his teenage years, was found dead of undisclosed causes in a hotel room, Vancouver police said. He was 31.

Police said Sunday that an autopsy is expected to take place Monday to determine the cause of death. Acting Vancouver Police Chief Doug LePard said late Saturday there was no indication of foul play.

The Canadian-born actor, who played Finn Hudson on the Fox TV series about a high school glee club, was found dead around noon Saturday in his room on the 21st floor of the Fairmont Pacific Rim Hotel on Vancouver's waterfront, according to police.

Monteith had openly talked about struggling with addiction since he was a teenager, saying he had a serious problem and took just "anything and everything." He told Parade magazine in 2011 that he was "lucky to be alive."

In April, Monteith checked himself in to a treatment facility for "substance addiction" and asked for privacy as he took steps toward recovery, a representative said at the time. It was not his first time in rehab. He received treatment when he was 19.

Lea Michele, his "Glee" co-star and real-life girlfriend, told People magazine at the time that she loved and supported him and was proud he was seeking help.

Michele was requesting privacy after receiving news of Monteith's death, said her representative, Molly Kawachi of ID-PR.

"We ask that everyone kindly respect Lea's privacy during this devastating time," Kawachi said in an email to The Associated Press.

Monteith's body was found by hotel staff who entered his room after he missed his check-out time, LePard said. Monteith had checked into the hotel on July 6.

"We do not have a great deal of information as to cause of death," said British Columbia Chief Coroner Lisa Lapointe. She said further tests would be needed to determine how Monteith died.

LePard said Monteith had been out with people earlier and that those people are being interviewed.

Video and electronic records from the hotel indicate Monteith returned to his room by himself early Saturday morning, and he was believed to be alone when he died, LePard said.

Lapointe said he had been dead for several hours by the time his body was found.

On his Twitter account, Monteith described himself as "tall, awkward, canadian, actor, drummer, person."

All in or all out for Ole Miss' Henderson

BY DAVID COLLIER
dcollier@go.olemiss.edu

Ole Miss basketball is in a crossroads.

They're coming off their most successful season since 2001, and head coach Andy Kennedy went from the hot seat to a nice contract extension at season's end.

How did that happen? Marshall Henderson.

The boisterous guard from Hurst, Texas, was used to making headlines for his actions, but the headlines that swarmed national news last week weren't what Henderson wanted.

Henderson was suspended indefinitely from Ole Miss last week for what they cited as "a violation of team rules." However, CBS first reported that Henderson's suspension came after a failed drug test. The Wall Street Journal reported that Henderson was caught with marijuana and cocaine during a routine traffic stop in May.

Whatever the case may be, Henderson needs help. He's had drug problems in the past that has made him see jail time and shift from school to school.

The suspension seems to say that Henderson will be back for basketball season, but when that may be is still up in the air. That decision will probably be based on Henderson's behavior between now and the start of the season, as you can rest assured head coach Andy Kennedy will keep a close eye on Henderson's every move.

"Since the season ended, we have talked a lot about Marshall taking a greater leadership role with our team," Kennedy said in a university statement. "With that comes greater responsibility, and he must do a better job of living up to the high standard we expect from him and he desires from himself."

So for now, it's all about regaining trust, if that's even possible.

The USA Today reported Henderson had a conversation with former NBA player Chris Herren, who also had drug problems during his playing days, after being contacted by an Ole Miss assistant. Herren is now a motivational speaker for collegiate and professional athletes going through those problems.

After the conversation,

Henderson went to Twitter and said, "Talkin with chris herren can make ya feel alot better!! #notgoinanywhere."

So it appears Henderson is initially taking steps in the right direction, but there's a long time between now and November.

If I were Kennedy, I'd let Henderson play when the season approaches, assuming he has good behavior until then, but I would give him an ultimatum.

Either get all in or get all out.

Kennedy took a big risk in bringing Henderson, who has a troubled past, to Oxford in the first place. It worked out for him and got him a contract extension. However, now he has to make sure Henderson doesn't take down everything he's built up.

Yes, without Henderson, Ole Miss probably doesn't make the NCAA Tournament. Ole Miss needed Henderson, but now, Henderson needs Ole Miss.

Henderson spoke several times during the Rebels' time in the NCAA Tournament about wanting to play basketball for a living. Well, in order to do that, he needs to play, which means he needs to clean up fast.

There's still time for Henderson to turn things around, but it won't be easy. No one will be there for him when the Rebels travel to opposing arenas around the Southeastern Conference. He'll continue to take the heavy dose of criticism, but Henderson can clean up and become a major success story by next March.

It's up to him. He's either all in or all out.

Shackelford makes Butkus Award watch list

Senior linebacker D.T. Shackelford

CHICAGO – Ole Miss senior linebacker D.T. Shackelford is one of 51 candidates on the preseason watch list for the 29th annual Butkus Award, which honors the nation's best linebacker.

A vocal team leader, Shackelford will make his return to the playing field this fall after missing the last two years with knee injuries. The Decatur, Ala., native recorded 68 tackles, 11.0 TFLs, 5.0 sacks, three fumble recoveries, a forced fumble and an interception in 23 games played as a freshman and sophomore. He was a 2009 SEC All-Freshman pick and the 2011 Chucky Mullins Courage Award winner.

Shackelford was previously named to the preseason watch list for the Lott IMPACT Trophy, as well. Other Rebels named to watch lists this preseason include Bo Wallace (Maxwell Award), Evan Swindall (Rimington Trophy) and Denzel Nkemdiche (Nagurski Trophy).

Ole Miss has one previous winner of the Butkus Award - Patrick Willis in 2006.

The Butkus Award is named after Dick Butkus, who is regarded by NFL Films as the best defensive player in football history. The selection panel is comprised of 51 coaches, evaluators and journalists. Players who do not appear on the watch list may be considered for the award.

Nkemdiche named to Lombardi Award watch list

HOUSTON, Texas – Denzel Nkemdiche added another preseason honor to his name on Monday when he was included on the preliminary watch list for the 2013 Rotary Lombardi Award.

The rising sophomore linebacker from Ole Miss is one of 106 players on the watch list, including 18 from the Southeastern Conference.

Eligibility for the Rotary Lombardi Award is limited to down linemen, end-to-end, either on offense or defense, who set up no farther than 10 yards to the left or right of the ball, or linebackers who set up no farther than five yards deep from the line of scrimmage. The candidates earned a place on the preliminary watch list by earning All-American honors, being named to their respective all-conference teams or receiving 2013 pre-season honors. The Rotary Lombardi Award Watch List will be updated prior to the start of the 2013 season in order to identify other players who have received significant pre-season honors.

Nkemdiche is also on the watch list for the Bronko Nagurski Trophy and has been tabbed preseason All-SEC and All-America this year by several magazines and websites that make early prognostications.

A native of Loganville, Ga., he led Ole Miss with 82 tackles, 13.0 tackles for loss, four forced fumbles and three interceptions as a redshirt-freshman last season. He earned Freshman All-America distinction, All-SEC second team and SEC All-Freshman accolades.

Position Breakdown: Secondary

The Daily Mississippian's David Collier breaks down the Ole Miss secondary in part seven of an eight-part series that will break down each position of the Rebels' 2013 football team.

BY DAVID COLLIER
dlcollie@go.olemiss.edu

After going from week to week hoping they had enough players to make it through each game last season, the Ole Miss secondary enters the 2013 season with a stable of players looking to solidify the Rebel defense.

In Ole Miss' 4-2-5 defense, there are plenty of opportunities for players to test the waters at different positions, but probably the most difficult and critical spot is at huskie.

Sophomore Mike Hilton ended his freshman campaign as the starter at huskie. Heading into fall camp, Hilton will look to improve on his play from last year, which saw him rack up 33 tackles, 3.5 tackles for loss, two sacks, two pass breakups and two forced fumbles.

Backing up Hilton will be senior Brishen Matthews, who has struggled to play extensive minutes due to injuries and mistakes in pass protection. Incoming freshman Antonio Conner will also be looking to get on the field at huskie. Conner, a five-star high school prospect, was rated the No. 2 safety in the country by 247Sports.com and ESPN.com. Conner could move back and play safety for Ole Miss, but his 6-foot-2, 205-pound frame makes him a prime candidate for the hybrid safety/linebacker role.

At corner, the Rebels enter August with senior Charles Sawyer and junior Senquez Golson as the two starters. Sawyer was fourth on the team with 63 total tackles last season. He also had an interception and eight pass breakups. Golson took a big step forward in 2012, tallying 36 total tackles and three interceptions, which was tied for the team lead.

Senior Dehendret Collins is the next most experienced corner, and his progression will be pivotal for the cornerback rotation. Last season, Collins had 30 tackles and three interceptions.

Junior Nick Brassell will be a huge addition to the Rebel secondary if he can get himself academically eligible for the fall. He showed he can play at this level his freshman year and has all the tools to be an NFL corner.

Sophomore Carlos Davis was moved to corner in the spring and could make an impact this season, but he is suspended for the first six games this year after playing while he was ineligible last fall. Junior Cliff Coleman and sophomore Anthony Standifer will also see action at corner.

Junior Cody Prewitt and sophomore Trae Elston lead Ole Miss at safety. Prewitt was second on the team last year with 80 total tackles, while also racking up five tackles for loss, 1.5 sacks, two interceptions, four pass breakups and two forced fumbles. Elston had 61 total tackles, a sack and six pass breakups.

Sophomore Chief Brown came on strong last year and should take another step forward in 2013. Last season, Brown had 17 total tackles, an interception, a forced fumble and fumble recovery. Sophomore Quintavius Burdette will also see action at safety.

It remains to be seen how big of an impact the incoming freshmen will make. Conner is probably the only one that will definitely not redshirt, but between Trey Bledsoe, Bobby Hill and David Kamara, someone else will probably play at the bottom of the secondary rotation and on special teams.

Analysis

It's obvious Ole Miss is in a much better spot entering 2013 than they were in 2012, but there are still depth issues. If last year's freshmen can take strides in the right direction, the Rebels can put together a solid unit.

I look for Elston, Brown, Golson and Hilton to really become big playmakers for the defense, and Conner will show flashes of the star he will one day become.

Sawyer will be consistent as he has always been, while Prewitt takes even more strides at safety.

If Brassell is eligible, he will give Ole Miss a huge boost, but even if he doesn't make it, they will be OK at corner.

It also remains to be seen what other position changes could come before the season starts. Junior college transfer Quadarias Mireles could get another look at corner if he doesn't progress up the depth chart at wide receiver, and incoming freshman Eugene Brazley is another candidate to shift over to the defensive side of the ball to get on the field quicker.

Things are still a work in process, and they will need a few more signing classes to get where they want to be. However, head coach Hugh Freeze and his staff are well on their way to building a good SEC secondary.
