 some of the tinsel or glitter surrounding the issue of whether or not to install a computer. He faces this as any crucial question for management: Will the installation add to the company's profits?

The author lists several "don'ts" when trying to make this decision, such as:

- (1) Don't plan an installation just to "keep up with the Joneses."
- (2) Don't switch well established tabulating routines to a computer.
- (3) Don't expect a one application job to pay for the computer.
- (4) Don't accept delivery until plans have been completed and you are ready.
