menting strategies and for ensuring survival.

Gary soon learned that the Hudson’s Bay Company archives were unique for their completeness of management accounting documentation from 1670. They provide a deep understanding of management accounting, and the opportunity to understand how management accounting functioned and its actual economic role. The result of Gary’s initial observation of a journal or ledger in a re-created fur trade post was 12 papers in refereed journals, many with co-authors who added important insights.

Gary is a professor of management accounting at the School of Administrative Studies, York University. He is also the associate dean for the 25,000 students at York’s Faculty of Liberal Arts & Professional Studies. About half of his research is devoted to accounting history with the remainder divided between management accounting, accounting education, and ethics.

As the vice-president of relations for the AAH, he is on the editorial advisory boards for the Journal of Accounting and Organizational Change and for Qualitative Research in Accounting Management. He an associate editor with Accounting Perspectives.

New Shipments of Materials at University of Mississippi Library

Members and scholars should be advised that there have been two significant shipments of materials received at the University of Mississippi library which may be of interest to historians. Eight cartons of materials from the research files of Dr. Edward N. Coffman, late professor of Accountancy at Virginia Commonwealth University contain original copies of the four-volume softbound sets of Academy Working Paper Series and several research file sets in various stages of undertaking and completion. The most prominent of these relate to members of the Accounting Hall of Fame who were former chairmen of the Financial Accounting Standards Board, all dating up to the period of about 2001. The files also contain briefer profiles of other Hall members and some of their papers and article publications for the same time period, through the early years of the 21st century.

The second recent shipment of 13 cartons of material was received from Professor Emeritus Doyle Z. Williams, former dean of the Walton School, University of Arkansas, and also a former faculty member at the University of Southern California.
AAH: Where would you like to see the Academy at 50 years?

I would like to see the Academy as an international organization with a strong United States base, whose members’ teaching and research are held in high regard throughout academia.

AAH: Any other thoughts to share with Academy members?

Please continue to promote accounting history to your colleagues and faculties as an effective tool for both teaching and research. Carry the message that it is important for all scholars to engage in research they really enjoy and they can have a rewarding career doing historical research. Also, disabuse anyone, who wants to do historical research, of the notion that it is “easy” because you simply “gather facts.” It is important that you convey to others the rigorous nature of good historical research.
