FOREWORD

The publication of this geographical list of accounting firms and individual practitioners has been authorized by the executive committee of the Institute.

Firms which have at least one partner who is a member or associate of the Institute, and individual practitioners who themselves are members or associates, are listed. Only the firm name and address in each city is included.

The number following the address is the zip number.

Offices are listed in accordance with information furnished to us by members in response to our request. In the absence of such information, the listings were compiled from our records.

Offices in Okinawa, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands are shown near the end of the list. Those in foreign countries are not included.

An alphabetical directory of all members and associates is scheduled to be published in 1967.

A FEW FACTS ABOUT CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANTS

As its name implies, the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants admits only CPAs to membership. First licensed in 1896 in New York, CPAs are members of a fast-growing profession which has nearly tripled in two decades (to an estimated 95,000). It is expected that the number will increase to more than 140,000 by 1975.

Competence

In order to become a CPA, one must satisfy education and experience requirements, specified by state law, and pass a difficult two-and-a-half-day written examination. The examination is prepared by the American Institute and is uniform in all states, territories and the District of Columbia.

Currently, almost 95 per cent of successful CPA candidates are college graduates.

Ethics

CPAs are subject to discipline under state laws or rules promulgated by state boards of accountancy. In addition, the individual practitioners and firms listed in this directory are also subject to the American Institute's Code of Professional Ethics. The Code contains twenty-one rules. Those of special interest to credit grantors and others who rely upon the profession are summarized as follows:

Independence. A member shall not express an opinion on the financial statements of an enterprise unless he is in fact independent. All relationships with a client should be assessed with this in mind.

No member is considered independent if he has any financial interest in, or is an officer, director, or key employee of, such an enterprise.

Technical Standards. In expressing an opinion on financial statements, a member must make all disclosures necessary to make the statements not misleading, and must conform with generally accepted accounting principles and auditing standards.

(Accounting principles and auditing standards are described in bulletins of the Institute which are available. Among other things, observation of inventories and confirmation of receivables are usually required when an opinion is given.)

The Institute's Accounting Principles Board is the profession's leading authority on what constitutes "generally accepted accounting principles." The Board considers studies published by the Institute's professional research staff and then makes pronouncements as to the accounting treatment which should be applied.

Effective with fiscal periods beginning after December 31, 1965, the governing Council has resolved that members should see to it that departures from the Board's pronouncements are disclosed either in the auditor's report or in footnotes to the financial statements. Wherever practicable the financial effect also should be reported.

Reporting Standards. A member shall not permit his name to be associated with financial statements unless he either (a) expresses an opinion or (b) disclaims an opinion and explains why (for example, because the scope of his examination has been limited by the client).

He may express a qualified opinion, so long as his exceptions are not so material as to negative the opinion as a whole. (For example, if inventory and receivables are material in relation to total assets, and he has not examined them, he may not express a qualified opinion, but must disclaim an opinion and explain why.)

Advertising and Solicitation are not permitted.

Confidential Relationship. A member shall not disclose confidential information without the permission of the client.

Copies of a booklet containing the Institute's Code of Professional Ethics, as well as opinions of its committee on professional ethics, are available on request.

Enforcement

Complaints alleging violation of the Code of Professional Ethics are accepted by the Institute from any source. Names of complainants may be held in confidence. If, after investigation, the Committee on Professional Ethics believes a violation has occurred, the respondent is summoned before the Trial Board. If found guilty, he may be admonished, suspended or expelled from Institute membership.

State societies have similar disciplinary machinery.

State boards of accountancy may suspend or revoke CPA certificates for violation of provisions in state accountancy laws.

Practice Review Board

This Board will review questionable reports by CPAs received from any source on a confidential basis, and will point out departures from standards to the CPA concerned. Names of persons submitting questionable reports will not be disclosed.

The Institute welcomes inquiries on any aspect of ethical conduct, and will fully respect confidences when requested.

The American Institute

The American Institute was organized in 1887—nine years before the first CPA law was passed—as the American Association of Public Accountants. It now has more than 58,000 members.

At present, sixty-five AICPA boards and committees are studying various aspects of the profession.

In addition to preparing the CPA examination and maintaining its Code of Professional Ethics, the American Institute performs such services as: providing professional development courses to keep practicing CPAs abreast of new accounting developments, aiding government agencies on accounting matters, and assisting members with technical problems.

It also publishes America's leading accounting periodical—The Journal of Accountancy—and Management Services, a bi-monthly magazine. The Journal has a circulation of nearly 120,000 accountants, business managers, government officials and educators.

The Institute's headquarters—at 666 Fifth Avenue, New York—has one of the largest and most comprehensive libraries on accounting in the world.

In addition to the Institute, most CPAs belong to a state society. While not formally affiliated with the Institute, the state societies work closely with the national body.
