A FEW FACTS ABOUT CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANTS

The American Institute of Certified Public Accountants is the national professional society of CPAs. This geographical directory lists firms all of whose partners are members of the Institute, and individual practitioners who are members. The asterisk (*) indicates membership in the Accounting Research Association whose dues finance the Institute's accounting and auditing research programs.

First licensed in this country in 1896 in New York, CPAs are members of a profession which has more than tripled in size in the past two decades (to an estimated 125,000). It is expected that the number will increase to almost 200,000 by 1980.

COMPETENCE

In order to become a CPA, one must satisfy education and experience requirements, specified by state law, and pass a difficult two-and-a-half-day written examination. The examination is prepared and graded by the American Institute and is uniform in all states, territories and the District of Columbia. Virtually all successful CPA candidates are college graduates.

The Institute also sponsors and administers a continuing education program in which some 25,000 CPAs participated last year.

PROFESSIONAL ETHICS

CPAs are subject to discipline under state laws and rules promulgated by state boards of accountancy. In addition, the individual practitioners and firms listed in this directory are subject to the American Institute's Code of Professional Ethics. Provisions of the Code of special interest to credit grantors and others who rely upon the profession are summarized as follows:

Independence. A member shall not express an opinion on the financial statements of an enterprise unless he is independent in fact and in appearance. All relationships with a client must be assessed with this in mind.

A member is not considered independent, for example, if he has any financial interest in, or is an officer, director, or key employee of an enterprise being audited.

Technical Standards. Before expressing an opinion on financial statements, a member must make an examination in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards, and must satisfy himself that the client has followed generally accepted accounting principles. In addition, he must acquire sufficient information to warrant the expression of an opinion and must make all disclosures necessary so that the statements are not misleading.

Accounting principles and auditing standards are described in bulletins of the Institute which are available. Among other things, observation of inventories and confirmation of receivables are usually required of the auditors when an opinion is given.

Reporting Standards. A member shall not permit his name to be associated with financial statements unless he (a) expresses an opinion or (b) disclaims an opinion and explains why (for example, because the scope of his examination has been limited by the client), or (c) marks the statements as unaudited. (Where a CPA's name is associated with a statement on which no opinion is expressed, a specific disclaimer should be issued.)

A member may express a qualified opinion, so long as his exceptions are not so material as to negate the opinion as a whole. (For example, if inventory and receivables are material in relation to total assets, and he has not examined them, he may not express even a qualified opinion, but must disclaim an opinion and explain why.)

Advertising and Solicitation of professional engagements is not permitted.

Members may not accept engagements on a contingent fee basis, and may not violate the confidential relationship between themselves and their clients.

Copies of a booklet containing the Institute's Code of Professional Ethics, as well as Opinions of its Division of Professional Ethics, are available on request.

ENFORCEMENT

Complaints alleging violation of the Code of Professional Ethics are accepted by the Institute from any source. Names of complainants, are held in confidence. If, after investigation, the Division of Professional Ethics believes a violation has occurred, the respondent is summoned before the Trial Board. If found guilty, he may be admonished, suspended or expelled from Institute membership.

State CPA societies have similar disciplinary machinery.

State licensing boards may suspend or revoke CPA certificates for violation of provisions in state accountancy laws or rules of conduct of the regulatory board.

The Institute welcomes inquiries on any aspect of professional conduct and will fully respect confidences when requested.

ACCOUNTING PRINCIPLES BOARD

The Institute's Accounting Principles Board is the profession's leading authority on what constitutes "generally accepted accounting principles." The Board makes formal pronouncements on the accounting treatment to be applied to financial statements, frequently after consideration of studies published by the Institute's professional research staff and public comment on tentative positions.

The Council, governing body of the Institute, has resolved that members should see to it that departures from the Board's pronouncements are disclosed either in the auditor's report or in footnotes to the financial statements. Wherever practicable the financial effect also should be reported.

A booklet describing the objectives and procedures of the Board is available upon request.

PRACTICE REVIEW COMMITTEE

This committee will review alleged substandard reports by CPAs received from any source on a confidential basis, and will point out any departures from standards to the CPA concerned. Names of persons submitting the reports will not be disclosed.

THE AMERICAN INSTITUTE

The American Institute was organized in 1887—nine years before the first CPA law was passed—as the American Association of Public Accountants. It now has more than 85,000 members.

At present, 126 AICPA boards and committees are studying various aspects of the profession.

In addition to preparing the CPA examination and maintaining its Code of Professional Ethics, the American Institute performs such services as: providing professional development courses to keep practicing CPAs abreast of new accounting developments, aiding government agencies on accounting matters, and assisting members with technical problems.

It publishes America's leading accounting periodical—The Journal of Accountancy—The Tax Adviser, another monthly magazine and the bimonthly Management Adviser. The Journal has a circulation of over 145,000 accountants, business managers, government officials and educators.

The Institute's headquarters—at 666 Fifth Avenue, New York—has one of the largest and most comprehensive libraries on accounting in the world.

In addition to the Institute, most CPAs belong to a state CPA society. While not formerly affiliated with the Institute, the state societies work closely with the national body.
