Directory of Accounting Firms and Practitioners 1979

Listed alphabetically by city within state are the individual accounting practitioners, accounting firms, and professional corporations whose partners or shareholders are all members of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants.

Founded in this country with the granting of a handful of licenses in New York in 1896, the CPA profession has enjoyed phenomenal growth. In recent decades, the number of CPAs has doubled approximately every ten years, and will reach an estimated 200,000 to 225,000 by the end of 1979. Of that number, more than 150,000 will be members of AICPA.

CPA Qualifications

In order to be considered for licensing by a state or territorial board of accountancy, a candidate for the CPA certificate must satisfy certain stringent legal requirements.

Education

In most states, possession of the equivalent of a college baccalaureate degree is necessary, although a few states require five years of college study.

Uniform CPA Examination

The Uniform CPA Examination is used by all state and territorial boards of accountancy to measure the technical competence of CPA candidates. The four-subject examination tests candidates' knowledge of auditing, accounting theory, accounting practice, and business law. The examination is administered each year in May and November at more than 110 sites throughout the country.

Experience

In many jurisdictions, candidates are required to have a specific amount of practical experience, usually in public accounting. The length of service required ranges from one to two years. In some cases, additional education may be substituted for the experience requirement.

Continuing Study

After certification by a board of accountancy, a CPA must periodically apply for certificate renewal. To remain current with professional developments, CPAs find it necessary to participate in continuing professional education activities. In a majority of the jurisdictions, ongoing study is mandatory.

Professional Ethics

Practitioners and firms listed in this book are subject to the AICPA Code of Professional Ethics administered by the AICPA and the 44 state CPA societies that are members of the Joint Ethics Enforcement Plan in addition to the requirements of state laws and the rules of boards of accountancy. The code states, in part, that a CPA's conduct should be guided by five broad ethical principles:

1. Independence, integrity, and objectivity. Certified public accountants should maintain their integrity and objectivity and, when engaged in the practice of public accounting, be independent of those they serve.
2. Competence and technical standards. Certified public accountants should observe the profession's technical standards and continually strive to improve their competence and the quality of their services.
3. Responsibilities to clients. Certified public accountants should be fair and candid with their clients and serve them to the best of their ability, with professional concern for their clients' best interests, consistent with CPAs' responsibilities to the public.
4. Responsibilities to colleagues. Certified public accountants should conduct themselves in a manner that will promote cooperation and good relations among members of the profession.
5. Other responsibilities and practices. Certified public accountants should conduct themselves in a manner that will enhance the stature of the profession and its ability to serve the public.

The concepts, rules, and interpretations of the code of professional ethics, as well as a copy of the code itself, may be obtained by writing to the AICPA, 1211 Avenue of the Americas, New York, New York 10036. Single copies are free of charge.

Enforcement

Complaints alleging violation of the AICPA Code of Professional Ethics received by the Institute are investigated by the AICPA Division of Professional Ethics. If, after investigation, the division believes a violation has occurred, the respondent may be reprimanded administratively or summoned before a trial board for a hearing. If found guilty, the respondent will be publicly admonished and may be suspended or expelled from Institute and state society membership. The latter action would only take place if the state society or societies involved participate in the AICPA Joint Ethics Enforcement Plan. State licensing boards may suspend or revoke CPA certificates for violation of their rules of conduct or provisions in their state accountancy laws. The Institute welcomes inquiries on any aspect of professional conduct and will, when requested, respect confidences.

Practice Review Committee

Complaints, from any source, of allegedly substandard reports signed by CPAs are reviewed by the AICPA Practice Review Committee. If the committee finds that a report does not comply with applicable standards, the committee will inform the CPA about departures from accepted standards. Names of those submitting reports to the practice review committee are held in confidence.

Division for CPA Firms

Over 1,600 CPA firms belong to this AICPA division, which consists of two sections, one for firms that serve SEC clients and one for firms that serve privately held clients. Many firms belong to both sections. An objective of the sections is to improve the quality of practice by CPA firms; thus, each member firm is required to undergo a peer review every three years. Membership is voluntary.

Other Institute Activities

More than 400 AICPA boards, committees, and task forces study various aspects of the profession.

The Institute publishes America's leading accounting periodical, The Journal of Accountancy, which is read by more than 232,000 CPAs, business executives, government officials, educators, and students. It also publishes The Tax Adviser, a monthly magazine, the semi-monthly CPA Letter, the Washington Report, Practicing CPA, and a wide range of technical and professional guidelines, studies, and services, including extensive continuing professional education materials.

The Institute's headquarters houses one of the most comprehensive libraries on accounting in the world.

In addition to their Institute membership, most CPAs also belong to a state CPA society. The state societies, while not formally affiliated with the Institute, work closely with it.

Financial Accounting Standards Board

The Financial Accounting Standards Board, an independent organization supported by the Institute, accounting firms, the business community, and the general public, is the leading private-sector authority on what constitutes generally accepted accounting standards.

The AICPA governing Council has recognized the FASB as the body that establishes accounting standards enforceable under the AICPA Code of Professional Ethics. The Securities and Exchange Commission has stated, in an official release, that it looks to the FASB to provide leadership in establishing and improving accounting standards.
