The Alumni Reunes

MR. ARTHUR MACARTHUR LOVIBOND was the attraction which brought together a number of old-timers at Keen's Chop House, Saturday evening, November 5, 1927. Frank McNally was master of ceremonies, egged on by one S. George Hay.

The occasion was designed to celebrate Mr. Lovibond's visit to his home shores after an absence of several years in Europe. The party was a huge success. The refreshments were delicious. Good-fellowship pervaded the gathering. The after-dinner remarks were reminiscent, and choice from the point of view of oratory.

In many respects the party resembled a reunion of Haskins & Sells alumni. Gage Hills was there, looking well and happy. Fred Clark, slightly more rotund than of yore, seemed to be having a good time, but left early. A. T. Johnston looked the part of a Captain of Industry, which he is, notwithstanding the fact that he is entitled to be called "Major," which he wasn't. W. H. Masterson, of baseball fame, turned up from New Jersey where he "practices" insurance. Others, who no longer are footing cash books, were J. H. Ostberg, J. W. Patton, and John Sanderson.

The remainder of the assemblage comprised J. W. Crowell, H. S. DeVault, D. H. Fetherston, J. H. Garrison, J. C. Heffer, J. M. Brennan, J. D. Anglin, E. T. Dissosway, H. S. Frost, H. A. Hall, A. W. Kritzberg, N. A. Nelson, T. S. Parker, A. H. Carter, C. E. Morris, W. H. Bell, L. E. Palmer, and J. R. Wildman.
