AUDITING RESEARCH MONOGRAPH NO. 6

Auditor Reviews of Changing Prices Disclosures (1985)

This important study examines the nature, extent and costs of the procedures used by auditors in complying with current standards for reporting the effects of changing prices.

Jointly sponsored by the FASB and the AICPA, the study is based on a survey and in-depth interviews with engagement partners, managers and others directly involved in reviewing changing prices data for clients. The findings reported in the monograph—as they pertain to the costs and special problems related to such reviews, and the auditors' perception of the usefulness and auditability of SFAS 33 data—should be of considerable value in helping auditors and accounting policymakers deal with the problems of changing prices.
