THEN WE HAD ANOTHER ONE

Sung by T. E. DUNVILLE.

Mack and me went out on the spree,
Down Piccadilly the other day you see ;
We went into every pub we met,
And "took the cake" at putting down the wet.
Brandies, sodas, ev'ry-thing we had—
Potmen, barmen, thought that we were mad ;
"Come on," Mack said "don't be slow,
Let's have another one before we go !"

Chorus.—

Then we had another one, not the same as the other one,
But the one before the t'other one, the brother, or the mother one,
Didn't quite agree with the other one ;
So we had another one, then another 'nother 'nother 'nother
'nother one,
But that one, and the other one, the one before the t'other one,
Made us go and have another 'nother one !

After that we went into a shop
Had fried hippopotamus and a mutton chop,
Came outside just like two hungry elks,
Mopped up a barrow full of penny plates of whelks.
Then for fun and kicking up a noise,
We made a raid on some saveloys ;
After we had devoured twenty-nine,
Mack said, "Ballyhooly ! ain't they fine !"

CHORUS.

Soon a crowd of coppers came in view,
We tried to go and do a "Bunk-a-doodle-do !"
They knocked me down, and bit me in the neck,
Tore the trousers off my back, and made me look a wreck.
Mack's nose, with blows, covered all his face—
No kid ! he did look a fair disgrace ;
One black eye we did possess,
They said "Have another ?" we said "Yes !"

CHORUS.

Soon we both got sleepy in the head,
Went to an hotel, tumbled into bed,
Tried our best—couldn't go to sleep,
Like two frogs we had to do a leap.
Sheets and blankets went upon the floor,
We swore till we couldn't swear no more !
Talk about the briny breeze—
We killed fifteen thousand fleas.

Chorus.—

And then we found another one, not the same as the other one,
But the one before the t'other one, the brother, or the mother one
Must have been in "Co." with the other one ;
For we found another one, then another, 'nother, 'nother one,
And that one and the other, the one before the t'other one,
Made another blister near the other one.
